St. Bartholomew the Great is a fine Norman structure founded by Rahere and is the oldest church in London. The beautiful Lady Chapel was for a long time used for secular purposes, but was re-opened in 1897. The church has been thoroughly restored during recent years, and many encroachments which defaced it removed.

Son. Mrs Sisk
have been here Yesterday.

My own darling Mamma Thought you would like to have this card of the "dear old Church"
Hope your head is feeling better to-day.
We have not been out this morning but are just going for a walk down to Balham. Was pleased to see Rob.
Baby watched all the trams for her for a long time but I had to put her to bed before she came. Olive turned up also Mrs S for a few minutes but did not take their things off. It was a change. I always feel all my company at one time. I miss dear Mary. She she will come over again
